

Problem Statement:

Busy college students need a more efficient way to manage their time and academic responsibilities, helping them to balance coursework with personal life while preparing them for future careers.

Details:

College is filled with numerous responsibilities. College students have various aspects of their lives to manage, including coursework, jobs, housing, friendships, relationships, and preparing for their futures. The key to making their lives more manageable would be an easy way to organize everything. The problem presents itself daily but only gets more difficult in stressful times, such as exam weeks, assignment deadlines, and application processes. These are times when multiple issues are competing for priority. Addressing this matters because it is important to avoid burnout and manage well-being. In conclusion, providing college students with an efficient time management system will greatly improve their ability to handle responsibilities and reduce stress.
